| 1 | February 16 | [During the Cuban people's war of independence againstSpanish colonial rule] "Spanish Gen. Valeriano Weylerbegins his 'reconcentration' policy in Cuba: buildingguarded encampments to which farmers are forced torelocate in order to deny support to Cuban revolutionaries.Many die in the unsanitary campsAlthough (U.S.)President (William) McKinley [in late 1897] condemns[Spain's use of] 'reconcentration', the U.S. Army lateradopts a similar policy in the Philippines in 1901." | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph."Deeper Intothe Exhibit,"handbook for"War andDissent: TheU.S. in thePhilippines,1898-1915," anexhibit at theOfficers' ClubExhibition Hall,Presidio of SanFrancisco,October 22,2008 toFebruary 22,2009. ThePresidio Trust.2008. Page 15. |
|---|-------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 2 | August 26   | After 333 years under Spanish colonial rule, indigenousFilipinos launch their own war of independence againstSpain. Within less than two years (by April 1898), with noassistance of U.S. fighting forces, they will control theentire non-Muslim portion of the archipelago formerlycontrolled by Spain, with the exception of Manila.[Incidentally, Muslim areas in the south, and remote areasof the mountain region of north Luzon island, had neverbeen conquered by the Spanish.]     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| 3 |             | [U.S. military historian Randolph Delahanty refers toFilipino fighters as " independence forces," a tacit U.S.military historical acknowledgment that independence andfreedom from outside rule was what the Filipinos werefighting for, and what America eventually deprived themof.]                                                                                                                                                                                                           | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph. Page25.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 4 | January 29                                           | Paraphrasing from source:While in the midst of their own fight for independenceagainst Spain, Filipino freedom fighters write the U.S. StateDepartment to ask for America's help: "Pray that help beextended to the Filipinos to expel the Spanish by force, justas the Emperor Napoleon helped America in the war ofseparation from England, by whose aid the Americansattained independence."                                                                                                                                                                                              | Bradley, James.The ImperialCruise: ASecret Historyof Empire andWar. Little,Brown andCompany, NewYork, 2009.Page 76. |
|---|------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 5 | Fall 1897                                            | In his autobiography, U.S. Admiral George Dewey writesthat already by the Fall of 1897 (i.e., a few months beforethe official cause of the Spanish-American War), "My heartwas set on having the Asiatic Squadron. It seemed to methat we were inevitably drifting into a war with Spain. Incommand of an efficient force in the Far East, with a freehand to act in consequence of being so far away fromWashington, I could strike promptly and successfully at theSpanish forces in the Philippines."                                                                                 | MILITARYSOURCEDewey, George.Autobiographyof GeorgeDewey:Admiral of theNavy. CharlesScribner's Sons,New York.1913. Page 168.                        |
| 6 | December 7                                           | <ul> <li>Paraphrased from the source:</li> <li>Dewey is ordered to leave America for Hong Kong, so thathe can command the U.S. Asiatic Squadron in case warbreaks out with Spain [even though Spain has not attackedor threatened to attack America].</li> <li>This is more than two months before the official "cause" ofthe Spanish-American War – i.e., the explosion of the U.S.navy ship Maine, in Havana, Cuba.</li> <li>(According to the 2007 PBS documentary "Crucible ofEmpire," U.S. Navy Assistant Secretary TheodoreRoosevelt gave the above order to Dewey.)</li> </ul> | MILITARYSOURCEDewey, George.Pages 169-170.                                                                                                                                     |
| 7 | Sometimebetween Fall1897 andFebruary 15, | President William McKinley and U.S. Navy AssistantSecretary Theodore Roosevelt take a horse-drawn buggyride around Washington DC to discuss America's economicprospects for the Philippines.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 2012 PBS"ManifestDestiny"documentary,                                                                                                                                          |

| 1898 | produced byGeorge Lucasand OregonPublicBroadcasting |
|------|---------------------------------------------------------------------|
|------|---------------------------------------------------------------------|

| 8  | February15 | The U.S. Navy ship U.S.S. Maine explodes in Havana Harbor in Cuba. America accuses the Spanish of aggression, and in America, open talk of war against Spain begins. To this day , there is still no conclusive proof that Spain was behind this explosion.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                        |
|----|----------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 9  | March 30       | "Spain stops its brutal policy of 'reconcentration' in Cuba."[Notice how this U.S. military historian acknowledges that this practice is "brutal."]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 17.                                                                              |
| 10 | April          | "(Filipino revolutionary General Emilio) Aguinaldo negotiatesthe purchase of rifles with U.S. Consul Rounseville Wildman inBritish Hong Kong."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 17.                                                                              |
| 11 | April 6        | Paraphrasing from source:With growing U.SSpain tensions (i.e., not only re the U.S.S.Maine, but also re America's aggressive insistence that Spaingrant independence to Cuba), Filipino revolutionary GeneralEmilio Aguinaldo is concerned about America's intentions in thePhilippines. The representative of U.S. Admiral Dewey, CaptainEdward P. Wood, assures Aguinaldo that the United States "didnot need colonies." Wood adds that Admiral Dewey would putsuch a statement in writing. | Karnow,Stanley. InOur Image:America'sEmpire in thePhilippines.RandomHouse, NewYork, 1989.Page 111. |
| 12 | April 11       | "In his annual message to Congress, (U.S. President)McKinley declares that the (U.S.) forcible annexation ofCuba 'by our code of morality, would be criminalaggression.' These words will come back to haunt him when                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,                                                                                                       |

|    |                                               | he buys the Philippines from Spain and forcibly occupies them."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Randolph.Page 17.                                                                                                                                                |
|----|-----------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 13 | April 19                                      | The Spanish-American War begins: The United Statesdeclares war against Spain, in reaction to the February 15explosion of the U.S. Navy ship U.S.S. Maine in HavanaHarbor in Cuba, which the United States questionablyblames on the Spanish.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 14 | April 20                                      | In stark contrast to America's blatant denial of self-determination and sovereignty to Filipinos a year later in1899, the U.S. Government, in the "Teller Amendment" of1898, decides the exact opposite fate for another formerSpanish colony, Cuba:"The People of the Island of Cuba are, of right ought to be,free and independentThe United States hereby disclaimsany disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty,jurisdiction, or control over said Islandto leave thegovernment and control of the Island to its people."http://www.historyofcuba.com/history/teller.htm |                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 15 | as of April30                             | "During the (Spanish-American) war, the United States andFilipino forces had allied against Spain; the Philippine Armycontrolled all [non-Muslim-controlled] areas except Manila."http://www.army.mil/article/40345/Macabebes_and_Moros/                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,"Macabebesand Moros,"Tarnowski,Amber. U.S.ArmyHeritage &EducationCenter. June4, 2010. |
| 16 | May 1                                         | U.S. Admiral George Dewey, in the first major battle of theSpanish-American War, dramatically defeats the Spanish navyin the one-day Battle of Manila Bay.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 17 | sometimebetweenMay 1 andAugust 13 | Paraphrasing from source:U.S. President William McKinley writes to himself, "While weare conducting a war and until its conclusion we must keep allwe get; when the war is over we must keep what we want."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Bradley, p.91.                                                                                                                                                   |

| 18 | betweenApril 6and May19 | <ul><li>Paraphrasing from source:</li><li>E. Spencer Pratt, a U.S. diplomat with no authority over U.S. foreign policy, implied to Aguinaldo on two separate occasions that America would respect Filipino aspirations for independence.</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Karnow, pp.111-112.                                                                 |
|----|-------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 19 | May 19                              | "(U.S. Commodore) Dewey receives (Philippine GeneralAguinaldo) on his flagship but does not recognize the PhilippineRepublic."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 18.                               |
| 20 | sometimein June                 | U.S. President McKinley cautions Admiral Dewey to avoid "a political alliance with the (Filipino) insurgents or any faction of the island that would incur liability to maintain their cause [of national independence] in the future."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Karnow, p.113.                                                                      |
| 21 | June 12                             | Paraphrasing from source:Out of gratitude for the May 1898 U.S. defeat of the Spanishnavy in Manila Bay, Filipino revolutionary General EmilioAguinaldo invites U.S. Admiral George Dewey to Aguinaldo'sformal ceremony of declaration of Philippine independence onJune 12, 1898 [which today is the official Day of Independencethat is celebrated in the Philippines, as opposed to the U.Simposed date of independence of July 4, 1946]. U.S. AdmiralDewey does not attend this June 12, 1898 formal ceremony ofPhilippine independence, claiming at first that he didn't receivethe invitation. In January 1902, Dewey tells a Senate committeereviewing Philippine policy that he had earlier dismissedPhilippine aspirations for independence. | Karnow, p.114 and 117.                                                              |
| 22 | related toJune 12               | Paraphrasing from source:In January 1902, U.S. Admiral Dewey also tells the Senatecommittee reviewing Philippine policy that he had neverintended in 1898 to develop close ties with Aguinaldo.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Karnow, p.113 and 114.                                                              |
| 23 | related toJune 12               | Excerpts from Hearing on Affairs in the Philippines, 1902:Sen. Patterson: You knew at the time, did you not, Admiral,that they were claiming the right to establish an independentgovernment or a government of their own there?Adm. Dewey: I am not sure whether that was before they                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | FilipinoEducationTask Force.PhilippineHistory andMis-education: |

|    |         | <ul> <li>issued that proclamation or after; I am not sure about that.</li> <li>Sen. Patterson: At least after the proclamation was issued, you knew that they were seeking to establish an independent government?</li> <li>Adm. Dewey: Yes.</li> <li>Sen. Patterson: You did not interfere in any way with the flying of the flag?</li> <li>Adm. Dewey: No, until there got to be too many of them there, and then I captured about 20, all they had</li> <li>Sen Patterson: When was that?</li> <li>Adm. Dewey: That was in the fall of 1898.</li> <li>Sen Patterson: That was after you took possession of the city; but I am talking about up to the time you took possession of the city; but I am talking about up to the time you took possession of the city on the 13th of August. You did not interfere – you knew at that time that they were organized for the purpose of establishing a government of their own?</li> <li>Adm. Dewey: I did not take that seriously, really.</li> <li>Sen Patterson: I know; but nevertheless you knew that there were many of thousands under arms with Aguinaldo: they had formed a civil government of which you had knowledge, they were flying the flag of their own country; and you did not interfere with it?</li> <li>Adm. Dewey: I knew that there was no government in the whole of the Philippines. Our fleet had destroyed the only government there was and there was no other government; there was a reign of terror throughout the Philippines, looting, robbing, murdering; a reign of terror throughout the islands.</li> </ul> | AnEvaluation ofReports onthePhilippinesand FilipinoPeople, asfound inCaliforniaSocialScienceTextbooks.PilipinoPeople's FarWestConvention,Daly City,CA.September1976. Pages9-10. |
|----|---------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    |         | Sen Patterson: We have no record of that, Admiral, up to the                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 24 | June 14 | "President McKinley decides not to return the Philippines to                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | MILITARY                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

|    |                               | Spain but is unsure whether to hold onto only a naval base in Manila, all of Luzon island, or the entire Philippines."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | SOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 19.                                                                                                            |
|----|-------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 25 | late July                     | U.S. President William McKinley cables Admiral Dewey inManila to request information about Philippine industry,farming, minerals and natural resources. In addition,McKinley's secretary of state appoints a representative to"investigate and report on financial and industrial conditions inthe Philippine islands."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Bain, DavidHaward.Sitting inDarkness:Americans inthePhilippines.HoughtonMifflinCompany,Boston, 1984.Page 74. |
| 26 | July 25                       | <ul> <li>"(Philippine) President (Emilio) Aguinaldo writes to (U.S.) Gen.Anderson, 'Iadvise you of the undesirability of distributing more[U.S.] troops in territory won by Filipino arms from Spain.' Gen.Wesley Merritt, commander of U.S. Expeditionary Forces, arrives andbegins shunting aside the Philippine Republic Army."</li> <li>[Again, it's important to remember that prior to U.S. involvement inthe Philippines in May 1898, Filipino revolutionaries over the pastnearly two years had gained control of all non-Muslim lands formerlycontrolled by Spain, with the exception of the capital city of Manila.]</li> </ul> | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 20.                                                                                                |
| 27 | late July-earlyAugust | Paraphrasing from source:Thanks to help from the Americans in the Battle of Manila Bay inMay 1898, the Filipinos were now on the verge of taking control ofManila from the Spanish, their last remaining target in order to claimfull independence from Spain. In late July-early August 1898,however, Spanish General Fermin Jaudenes decided, in an act to saveface for the white Spanish, to surrender "to white people, never toniggers."                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Karnow, p.123.                                                                                                                                       |
| 28 | August                        | "President McKinley authorized the occupation of Manila by U.S. forces in August of 1898 and the retention of the islands in December of that year." http://www.army.mil/article/10507/an-uncommon-hero/                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle, Giblin,John F. "AnUncommonHero." ArmyHeritage and                                            |

|    |                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | EducationCenter. June30, 2008.                                                           |
|----|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 29 | August 13                         | Paraphrasing from source:The Spanish military leadership, through the diplomatic go-between ofthe Belgian government (specifically through Belgian consul toSpanish rule in Manila, Eduoard Andre), arranges with the Americansto stage a phony August 13, 1898 battle in which Americans – notFilipinos – emerge victorious, and this battle is to officially representthe decisive defeat of the Spanish, to Americans , in the Philippines.Filipinos are not aware at all about this agreement, and they believethe battle is authentic. American military leadership orders its soldiersto discourage and prevent their Filipino allies from being involved inthis battle. | Karnow, pp.123-124.                                                                          |
| 30 | August 13                         | "Some 10 to 15,000 Spanish troops are pushed back into the capitaland surrounded by Philippine Republic forces. By secret priorarrangement, U.S. forces pass through the Filipino forces and engagethe Spanish who offer only token resistance before surrendering to theU.S. The U.S. closes the gates of Manila to the Philippine Army."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Pages 20-21.                                    |
| 31 | August 13                         | "The Spaniards chose to conditionally surrender to the Americans; amock-exercise was arranged to ensure Filipino forces would not bepresent in Manila. This was interpreted as an act of colonialaggression, which sparked Filipino insurgency."http://www.army.mil/article/40345/Macabebes and Moros/                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,"Macabebesand Moros,"Tarnowski,Amber. |
| 32 | Septemberto earlyNovember | Paraphrasing from source:Stumping for his political party during the mid-term electioncycle in the fall of 1898 (significantly, BEFORE the Treaty ofParis of December 1898, and BEFORE the outbreak of war withthe Filipinos in February 1899), U.S. President McKinleycampaigns on a platform that the United States MUST havecontrol of the Philippines.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Karnow, pp.129-130.                                                                          |
| 33 | September                         | Paraphrasing from source:No Filipinos were invited to, or present at, the Treaty of Paris inDecember 1898, an international meeting at which Spain and theU.S. would determine the political fate of the Philippines. As a                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Karnow, p.128.                                                                               |

|    |                                   | matter of fact, in September 1898, U.S. President McKinleyexplicitly DECLINES Philippine diplomat Felipe Agoncillo'srequest to attend the upcoming Treaty of Paris, citingAgoncillo's poor accent in English and claiming that Filipinopresence would offend the Spanish. Agoncillo had made thelong trip from the Philippines to see McKinley in September1898 just to make sure that McKinley would honor AdmiralDewey's earlier purported pledges to Philippine General EmilioAguinaldo that America would acknowledge Philippineindependence.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                              |
|----|-----------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------|
| 34 | October 1                         | "Spanish and U.S. Commissioners convene in Paris to negotiatea peace treaty. Neither the Cubans nor the Philippine Republicis represented at the negotiations."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 21.    |
| 35 | SeptDec                           | Treaty of Paris controversy:The decision by U.S. policymakers to annex the Philippines wasnot without domestic controversy. Americans who advocatedannexation evinced a variety of motivations: desire forcommercial opportunities in Asia, concern that the Filipinoswere incapable of self-rule, and fear that if the United States didnot take control of the islands, another power (such as Germanyor Japan) might do so. Meanwhile, American opposition to U.S.colonial rule of the Philippines came in many forms, rangingfrom those who thought it morally wrong for the United Statesto be engaged in colonialism, to those who feared thatannexation might eventually permit the non-white Filipinos tohave a role in American national government. Others werewholly unconcerned about the moral or racial implications ofimperialism and sought only to oppose the policies of PresidentWilliam McKinley's administration.http://history.state.gov/milestones/1899-1913/War | U.S. GOV'T.SOURCEU.S. StateDepartmentwebsite |
| 36 | October 8toNovember20 | Paraphrasing from source:U.S. Admiral George Dewey in the latter half of 1898 hadcommissioned two naval officers – W.B. Wilcox and CadetL.R. Sargent – to survey hundreds of Filipinos for twomonths in Luzon to get their feelings about FilipinoGeneral Aguinaldo and Philippine independence. Thesurvey found two things: 1) that Filipinos overwhelminglyrespected Aguinaldo [despite U.S. military historians'                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Karnow, pp. 128-129.                                         |

|    |                                   | ongoing effort to de-legitimize Aguinaldo as a "dictator" –even to the present day!], and 2) that while Filipinos hadwished for continued protection from the U.S., Filipinos atthat time nevertheless overwhelmingly believed America"has not gained the right to annex them." For unknownreasons, Dewey delayed sending this survey toWashington, where the report simply got filed away, and itwas never factored into any subsequent U.S. policy towardthe Philippines.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                       |
|----|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 37 | October 8toNovember20 | "Wilcox and Sargent documented a fully functioningFilipino government that was efficiently administeringjustice through its courts, keeping the peace, providingpolice protection, holding elections, and carrying out theconsent of the governed. The two Americans recalled themoving, patriotic speech of a Philippines governmentofficial who promised that 'every man, woman and childstood ready to take up arms to defend their newly wonliberty and to resist with the last drop of their blood theattempt of any nation whatever to bring them back to theirformer state of dependence.' When the burden-bearing menin the War Department realized Dewey's report haddocumented Aguinaldo's functioning democracy, theyburied it." | Bradley, p.101.                                                   |
| 38 | December                          | <ul> <li>"President McKinley authorized the occupation of Manila by U.S. forces in August of 1898 and the retention of the islands in December of that year."</li> <li>[Note use of the word "retention": as if the Philippines was morally America's to "retain."]</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle, "AnUncommonHero," |
| 39 | December                          | http://www.army.mil/article/10507/an-uncommon-hero/                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Giblin, JohnF.                                                    |
| 37 | December                          | Paraphrasing from source:In 1898-1899 U.S. Government and military officials andhistorians begin their perpetual use of the words"insurrection" and "insurgents" [as opposed to "war" and"freedom fighters," respectively] when publicly discussingthe differing U.S. and Philippine visions regarding thepolitical fate of the Philippines, and what eventuallybecomes the Philippine-American War.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Karnow, p.140.                                                    |
| 40 | December10                    | Paraphrasing from source:                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Karnow, p.130.                                                    |

|    | 1              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |
|----|----------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|
|    |                | Treaty of Paris: High-level representatives of the U.S. andSpanish governments agree that Spain will hand control of thePhilippines to the U.S. (along with Cuba, Guam and PuertoRico). No Filipinos are in attendance. Spain has no moral rightto sell, and America has no moral right to buy, the islands.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| 41 | December21 | Excerpts of U.S. President William McKinley's "BenevolentAssimilation Proclamation" to the U.S. Secretary of War(emphases added):                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |
|    |                | With the signature of the treaty of peace between the UnitedStates and Spain by their respective plenipotentiaries at Paris onthe 10th instant, and as a result of the victories of Americanarms, the future control, disposition, and government of thePhilippine Islands are ceded to the United States. In thefulfillment of the rights of sovereignty thus acquiredtheactual occupation and administration of the entire group of thePhilippine Islands becomes immediately necessary                                                                                                                                                 |  |
|    |                | In performing this duty the military commander of the UnitedStates is enjoined to make known to the inhabitants of thePhilippine Islands that in succeeding to the sovereignty ofSpainthe authority of the United States is to be exerted forthe securing of the persons and property of the people of theislands and for the confirmation of all their private rights andrelations                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |
|    |                | the control of all the public property and the revenues of thestate passes with the cession, andthe use and management ofall public means of transportation are necessarily reserved tothe authority of the United States                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |
|    |                | Finally, it should be the earnest wish and paramount aim of the military administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by assuring them in every possible way that full measure of individual rights and liberties which is the heritage of free peoples , and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule. In the fulfillment of this high mission, supporting the temperate administration of affairs for the greatest good of the governed, there must be sedulously maintained the strong |  |
|    |                | arm of authority, to repress disturbance and to overcome allobstacles to the bestowal of the blessings of good and stablegovernment upon the people of the Philippine Islands underthe free flag of the United States.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |

|    |                         | http://salempress.com/store/samples/milestone_am_leaders/milestone_am_leaders_benevolent.htm                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                                    |
|----|-------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|
| 42 | afterDecember21 | <ul><li>"Gen. Otis reported that McKinley's "Benevolent AssimilationProclamation" was met by such general protest that:</li><li>'Even the women of Cavite province, in a document numerouslysigned by them, gave me to understand that after all the men arekilled off they are prepared to shed their patriotic blood for theliberty and independence of their country.'</li></ul> | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnote 38 |
| 43 | December23          | "U.S. Gen. Otisplaces U.S. Gen. Miller in command of anexpedition to seek the surrender of the city of Iloilo – thefirst to be affected by McKinley's orders [i.e., to take controlof lands beyond the capital city of Manila]Gen. Millerupon arriving in Iloilo ordered the Philippine Army officersthen in possession to relinquish the city to U.S. occupation."                 | FilipinoEducationTask Force.Page 11.   |

| 44 | January 5                                                                                               | [In response to Gen. Miller's December 23 order thatPhilippine Army officers hand control of Iloilo over to theAmericans] "Aguinaldo issued a retaliatory proclamationprotesting against the 'intrusion of the United Statesgovernment on the sovereignty of these islands.' This protestwas later characterized by Gen. Otis as a 'virtual declaration ofwarfrom the wretchedly advised Pres. Aguinaldo."" | FilipinoEducationTask Force.Page 11.         |
|----|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------|
| 45 | January(post-Treaty ofParis)                                                                | " 'Scientific racism' (was) the then-accepted belief that racesformed a hierarchy with whites on top and non-whites belowthemThis sense of racial superiority helps explain why theUnited States occupied the Philippines after expelling Spain in1898 and why it fought the Philippine independence movementfor sixteen years."                                                                                | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 7. |
| 46 | for severalmonthsprior toofficialoutbreakof war onFebruary | Paraphrasing from source:U.S. soldiers had ALREADY been regularly killing Filipino S ,plural , for MONTHS, PRIOR to February 1899, which theFilipinos had not exploited to create an international incident.                                                                                                                                                                                              | Karnow, p.131                                        |

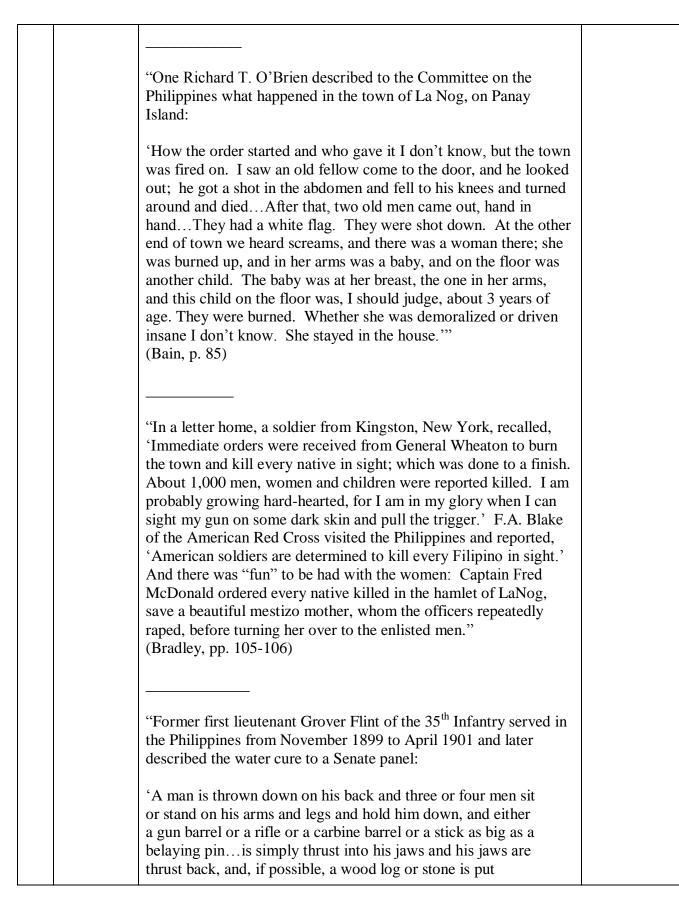

|    | 4, 1899                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                              |
|----|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------|
| 47 | for severalmonthsprior toofficialoutbreakof war onFebruary4, 1899 | Paraphrasing from source:The following is one serious symptom of the increasingtensions between the occupying U.S. forces and the Filipinopeople after more than half a year of U.S. military occupation(i.e., several months PRIOR to the outbreak of war February1899): A U.S. Army private wrote to his father in January1899, "We have to kill one or two (Filipinos) every night."                                                                                                                                    | Bain, p. 77.                                                 |
| 48 | February 4                                                                                                         | Paraphrasing from source:On February 4, 1899 an American soldier named PrivateWilliam Grayson fires the actual "first shot" at Filipinos,contrary to U.S. President McKinley's claims to Congress thatFilipinos struck the "first blow" at American soldiers. Strangely,it just so happens that Congress is, at that very historicalmoment, coincidentally preparing to vote to ratify the December1898 Treaty of Paris (which in U.S. eyes legally recognizesSpain's handing over of the Philippines to America). | Karnow p.140.                                            |
| 49 | February 4                                                                                                         | Paraphrasing from source:As a result of this supposed "first blow" supposedly fired byFilipinos, U.S. President McKinley lies to Congress onFebruary 6, 1899 – the eve of Congress' ratification vote –"The first blow was struck by the (Filipino) inhabitantsTheyassailed our sovereignty and there will be no useless parley, nopause, until the insurrection is suppressed and Americanauthority acknowledged and established." Incidentally, noAmericans died in this supposed "first blow."                  | Bain, p. 78.                                                 |
| 50 | February4-5                                                                                                    | "President McKinley wrongly claims that 'the (Filipino)insurgents have attacked Manila.""                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Pages 22-23 |
| 51 | February4-6                                                                                                    | Paraphrased from source:On that fateful day that the war began (February 4, 1899),James Bradley writes: "U.S. forces killed more than threethousand Filipino freedom fighters in twenty-four hoursInthe annals of warfare, few remember that more Filipinos dieddefending their country in that first day's storm than                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Bradley, pp. 102-103.                                        |

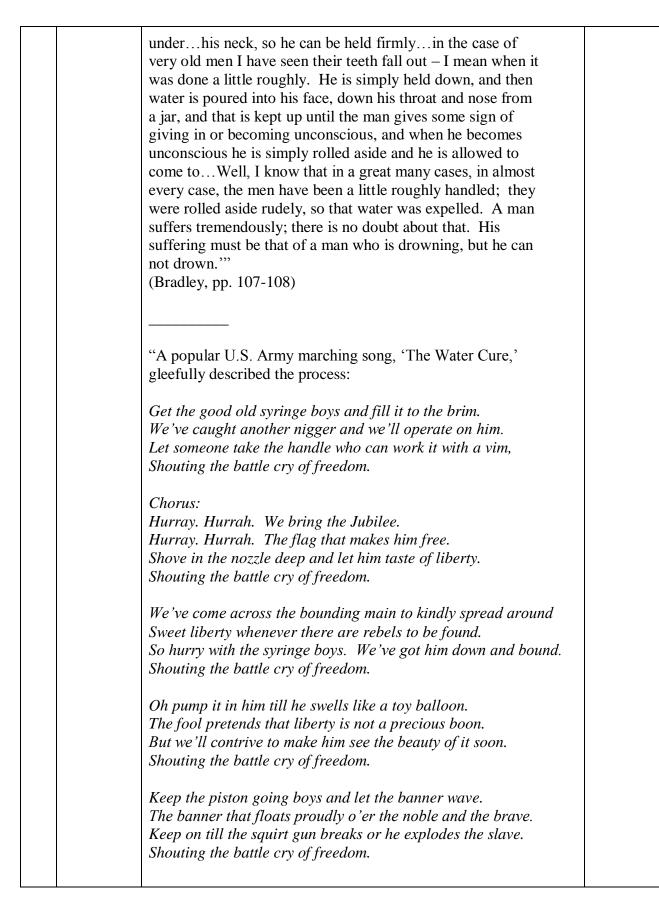

|    |                                                                       | Americans died storming the beaches of Normandy on D-Dayin World War II." Two days later on February 6, 1899, theU.S. Congress, which believes McKinley's claim that Filipinosstruck the "first blow," ratifies the December 1898 Treaty ofParis in which Spain signed over "ownership" of thePhilippines to America. Again, Spain has no moral right tosell, and the U.S. has no right to buy, the Philippines.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                     |
|----|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 52 | broad timereference(generallybetween1899 and1901) | <ul> <li>"U.S. forces at times burned villages, implemented civilian reconcentration policies, and employed torture on suspected guerrillas, while Filipino fighters also tortured captured soldiers and terrorized civilians who cooperated with American forces. Many civilians died during the conflict as a result of the fighting, cholera and malaria epidemics, and food shortages caused by several agricultural catastrophes."</li> <li>http://history.state.gov/milestones/1899-1913/War</li> <li>[The choice of words here is a perfect example of what is referred to as the tactic of "Portraying the war as having been fought on a level playing field," as described in this website, under the menu item "The Problem" – "Proposals" – "State of California Curriculum."]</li> </ul> | U.S.GOV'T.SOURCEU.S. StateDepartmentwebsite                                     |
| 53 | broad timereference(generallybetween1899 and1901) | <ul> <li>"Soldiers also learned to abide by the laws of war and set more humane boundaries for future military operations to mitigate extreme cruelty."</li> <li>[Although this passage doesn't give specifics, the choice of words here seems to imply that the soldiers previously had not abided by the laws of war during the conflict, and that they committed crimes against humanity.]</li> <li>http://www.au.af.mil/au/awc/awcgate/milreview/bundt2.pdf</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle, "AnUnconven-tional War,"Bundt,Thomas S. |
| 54 | Feb. 4-6                                                              | "Dewey steamed up the Pasig River and fired 500-pound shellsinto the Filipino trenches at close range with pulverizingeffectiveness.""The first battle was so one-sided that the American troopsjokingly referred to it as a 'quail shoot' and dead Filipinoswere piled so high that the Americans used the bodies forbreastworks."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Francisco,Luzviminda                                                                            |
| 55 | firstmonths of                                                    | "Red Cross personnel reported an extremely high ratio of dead to wounded on the battlefied, indicating, 'the                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Francisco,Luzviminda                                                                            |

|    | fighting                                                              | determination of our coldiers to kill every notive in eight "                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                     |
|----|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
|    | fighting,startingFeb. 4-6                                     | determination of our soldiers to kill every native in sight""                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Footnote:Van Meter,332.     |
| 56 | broad timereference(generallybetween1899 and1902) | "Press censorship was so effective that few Americans actuallyknew the difficulties being experienced in the Philippines – or, infact, that there were 70,000 U.S. troops in the Islands. In early1900 the first whiff of scandal reached American shores when itwas disclosed that the American forces had been issued expanding"dum-dum bullets, in contravention of the 1899 HagueConvention concerning humane warfare." [which the U.S. hadconveniently neglected to ratify]"Reports of the burning of villages, the killing of non-combatantsand the application of the "water cure" to elicit information beganto filter back to the U.S."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Francisco,Luzviminda            |
|    |                                                                       | From a U.S. soldier's letter: "On Thursday, March 29 th (1901)eighteen of my company killed seventy-five nigger bolomen and ten of the nigger gunnersWhen we find one who is not dead, we have bayonets." (Footnote 15)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                     |
|    |                                                                       | Footnote 15: "Fairfield, Maine Journal, excerpted from a letterfrom Sgt. Howard McFarlane, 43rd Infantry. Quoted in Wolff,305. The soldiers who wrote such letters were invariably contactedby military authorities and forced to write retractions, which werethen hastily published to refute the original information. Readingthe retractions tends to confirm in one's mind the verity of theoriginal statement. Refusal to write a retraction was not kindlylooked upon by the military and the kinds of pressure tacticsemployed by the War Department became something of a scandalafter being disclosed in Senate hearings in 1902. SenatorMcLaurin called it a 'remarkable coincidence' that in every casewhere the soldier was still in the army, 'retractions wereforthcoming. But when the soldier had already been dischargedand was no longer subject to military discipline, 'there was notan instance found where there was any modification, qualificationor retraction of what had been said .' Congressional Record, 57:1,May 15, 1902, 5480." |                                     |
| 57 | Feb. 5 and6                                                       | "A manager and nurse of the Red Cross Society writing aboutthe battle on those days, Feb. 5 and 6, said:                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | FilipinoEducationTask Force |
|    |                                                                       | 'I never saw such an execution in my life, and hopenever to see such sights as met me on all sides as our                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Footnote 32:                        |

|    |                                                                       | little corps passed over the field, dressing would –legs and arms nearly demolished, total decapitation,horrible wounds in chests and abdomens, showing thedetermination of our soldiers to kill every native insight. The Filipinos did stand their ground heroically,contesting every inch, but proved themselves unableto stand the deadly fire of our well-trained and eagerboys in blue. I counted severty-nine dead natives inone small field and learn that on the other side of theriver their bodies were stacked up for breastworks.*(32)                                                                                                                                    |                                                                 |
|----|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| 58 | firstmonths offighting,startingFeb. 4-6               | <ul> <li>"An American soldier, writing from the field about the same battle, said:</li> <li>'Some English naval officers came out with a lot of whiskey, which they gave to our men. They said they did not mind seeing the great number of dead and wounded insurgents all around them, because a million of their lives are not worth the life of one of our brave Americans, and I think they are just about right.""</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnote 33:             |
| 59 | broad timereference(generallybetween1899 and1902) | <ul> <li>"The ensuing Philippine-American War lasted three years and resulted in the death of over 4,200 American and over 20,000 Filipino combatants. As many as 200,000 Filipino civilians died from violence, famine, and disease."</li> <li>http://history.state.gov/milestones/1899-1913/War</li> <li>[This has been the longstanding official U.S. Government underestimate of Philippine civilian deaths, and of the true length of combat, for more than a century in state curriculum throughout America. See entry for May 1901 that contradicts the "200,000" figure, based on the U.S. military's own estimates at the time, and see the 1913 entry re: the true date of the war's last battle.]</li> </ul> | U.S.GOV'T.SOURCEU.S. StateDepartmentwebsite |
| 60 | broad timereference(generallybetween1899 and1902) | "it is estimated that a million Filipinos died in the course of the war"                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnote 35:             |

| 61 | Februaryandafterward                                                                                                                        | "The U.S. Army conducted its counterinsurgency in thePhilippines using some techniques that were similar totechniques it had employed successfully in the AmericanWest against its irregular opponents during the Indian Wars.Indeed, 26 of the 30 U.S. generals who served in thePhilippines during the insurgency between 1898 and 1902 hadalso served in the Indian WarsThey comprehended,asothers had in the Indian Wars before them, that theemployment of indigenous forces as auxiliaries or scoutswouldcontribute to a 'divide-and-subjugate' operationalcampaign."http://www.army.mil/professionalWriting/volumes/volume4/july2006/7 06 1.html                                                                                                                                 | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,Cassidy,Robert M."The LongSmall War:IndigenousForces forCounter-insurgency."The U.S.ArmyProfessionalWritingCollection.Parameters.Summer2006. |
|----|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 62 | afterFebruary                                                                                                                                   | U.S. President William McKinley famously justifies thelaunch of the Philippine-American War after February 1899,while addressing a group of Methodist ministers: "(TheFilipinos) were unfit for self-government. There was nothingleft for us to do buteducateand uplift and Christianizethem."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| 63 | severalexamplesof U.S.soldiers'eyewitnessaccountsof specificatrocitiesfromFebruary1899 toAugust1902 | "We make everyone get into his house by seven PM, and we onlytell a man once," wrote Corporate Sam Gillis of the FirstCalifornia. "If he refuses, we shoot him. We killed over 300 thefirst nightIf they fire a shot from a house we burn the housedown and every house near it, and shoot the natives, so they arepretty quiet in town now." A private in the Utah Battery wrotehome of a "Goo Goo" hunt: "With an enemy like this to fight, it isnot surprising that the boys should soon adopt 'no quarter' as amotto, and fill the blacks full of lead before finding out whetherthey are friends or enemies." Another soldier reported that "ourfighting blood was up, and we all wanted to kill 'niggers'Thisshooting human beings beats rabbit hunting all to pieces."(Bain, pp. 83-85) | varioussources: seecolumn atleft, end ofentry, inparentheses                                                                                                                                                                               |

|    |            | Chorus:Hurrah. Hurrah. We bring the Jubilee.Hurrah. Hurrah. The flag that makes him free.We 've got him down and bound, so let's fill him full of liberty.Shouting the battle cry of freedom."(Bradley, pp. 108-109)————————————————————————————————————                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                       |
|----|------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 64 | April      | General (William) Shafter: "It may be necessary to kill half theFilipinos in order that the remaining half of the population may beadvanced to a higher plane of life than their present semi-barbarous state affords."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Francisco,LuzvimindaVan Meter,368.                                                                                        |
| 65 | April 10   | U.S. Assistant Secretary of the Navy (and future U.S. Vice-President and U.S. President) Theodore Roosevelt says,"We cannot avoid the responsibilities that confront us in thePhilippinesby bringing order out of chaosWe cannot sithuddled within our own borderswe must build up our powerwithout our own borders. We musthave our say in decidingthe destiny of the oceans of the East and the WestMany of(the Filipino) people are utterly unfit for self-government, andshow no signs of becoming fitI have scant patience withthose who fear to undertake the task of governing thePhilippinesbut I have even scanter patience with those whomake a pretense of humanitarianism to hide and cover theirtimidity, and who cant about 'liberty' and the 'consent of thegoverned,' in order to excuse themselves for theirunwillingness to play the part of men. Their doctrines, ifcarried out, would make it incumbent upon us to leave theApaches of Arizona to work out their own salvation, and todecline to interfere in a single Indian reservation."http://www.bartleby.com/58/1.html | Roosevelt,Theodore."TheStrenuousLife,"speechbefore theHamiltonClub,Chicago.April 10,1899. |
| 66 | related to | "[Future] President (Theodore) Roosevelt believed that the                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | MILITARY                                                                                                                              |

|    | April 10             | United States should use its military-industrial strength tobring 'order out of chaos' [in the Philippines] and police theoutside world as a colonial power."http://www.army.mil/professionalWriting/volumes/volume7/february 2009/2 09 4.html                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | SOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,Tracy, Sgt.Jared."EthicalChallengesin StabilityOperations."The U.S.ArmyProfessionalWritingCollection. |
|----|----------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 67 | May 20               | Paraphrasing from source:U.S. Brigadier General Frederick Funston tells the magazineHarper's Weekly in its May 20 issue, "In our fighting with them[Filipinos], they violated all the rules of civilized warfare, andthey knew perfectly well what they were violating."                                                                                                                                                                                                | Bain, pp. 86-87.                                                                                                                                                             |
| 68 | related toMay 20 | Brig. Gen. Funston tells the New York Times: "The word independentis to them [the Filipinos] a word, and not much more. It means with them simply a license to raise hellThey are, as a rule, an illiterate, semi-savage people, who are waging war, not against tyranny, but against Anglo-Saxon order and decency."                                                                                                                                                                          | Bain, p. 87.                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 69 | related toMay 20 | Brig. Gen. Funston: "I, for one, hope that Uncle Sam willapply the chastening rod, good, hard, and plentyuntil they[the Filipinos] come into the reservation and promise to begood Injuns."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Bain, p. 88.                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 70 | related toMay 20 | "The Medal of Honor recipient (Brig. Gen.) Frederick Funstonexecuted POWs, tortured civilians, and raped women and thenstoutly defended these tactics: 'I am afraid some people at homewill lie awake nights worrying about the ethics of this war,thinking that our enemy is fighting for the right of self-governmentThey are, as a rule, an illiterate, semi-savage people,who are waging war, not against tyranny, but against Anglo-Saxonorder and decency."" | Bradley, p.110.                                                                                                                                                              |
| 71 | July 30              | " (U.S. Secretary of State Elihu Root) hadreceived (U.S.)General (Elwell) Otis's report for the year ending July 30,1899, which may be searched from beginning to end without                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | U.S.GOV'T.SOURCE                                                                                                                                                         |

|    |                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | T1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|----|----------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    |                | finding any charge that the Filipinos had been guilty ofcruelty to our men, far less that they had conducted the war'with the barbarous cruelty common among uncivilizedraces, and with general disregard of the rules of civilizedwarfare.""http://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Secretary_Root%27s_Record:%22Marked_Severities%22_in_Philippine_WarfareIn addition to the link directly above, another extensive officialU.S. Government source in regard to details of the Philippine-American War (at least, from the points-of-view of theAmerican Government and U.S. military) can be found here,the "United States Congressional Serial Set, Issue 4244":http://books.google.com/books?id=hOk3AQAAIAAJ&pg=PA2266&lpg=PA2266&dq=sorsogon+1901+1.000&source=bl&ots=KZ_Brmu3j_&sig=-CNefVBGkOiCJ4T2QH8rSMaMat8&hl=en&sa=X&ei=3sP7UomNC4ivrgGA-YGoDQ&ved=OCCgO6AEwAQ#v=onepage&q=sorsogon%201901%201%2C000&f=false | Storey,MoorfieldandCodman,Julian."(U.S.)Secretary (ofState Elihu)Root'sRecord:'MarkedSeverities'in PhilippineWarfare,"Report ofthePhilippineInvestigatingCommitteeformed inApril of1902 toinvestigateandpublicizeU.S. militaryatrocities inthePhilippines.Geo. H EllisCo. Boston.August 29,1902. |
| 72 | November11 | "When the battle of San Jacinto ended, 7 Americans and 134Filipinos were killed, many of those casualties to the singleGatling gun the American Soldiers carried and put intoaction."http://www.army.mil/article/47711/Battle of San Jacinto/                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,Statler,Greg."Battle ofSanJacinto."U.S. Army                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

|  | Heritage andEducationCenter.November 5,2010. |
|--|--------------------------------------------------------------|
|--|--------------------------------------------------------------|

| 73 | January 9  | U.S. Senator Albert Beveridge (R-Indiana) addresses Congress withthe following words:"The Philippines are ours foreverAnd just beyond thePhilippines are China's illimitable marketsWe will notrenounce our part in the mission of our raceunder God, of thecivilization of the worldthanksgiving to Almighty God that Hehas marked us as His chosen peopleThe Philippines give us abase at the door of all the East(T)he Pacific is the ocean of thecommerce of the future. Most future wars will be conflicts forcommerce. The power that rules the Pacific, therefore, is thepower that rules the world. And, with the Philippines, that poweris and will forever be the American Republic(W)e are notdealing with Americans or Europeans. We are dealing withOrientalsThey are not capable of self-government(W)e mustnever forget that in dealing with the Filipinos we deal with | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Pages 70-75.additionalU.S.GOV'T.SOURCE:                              |
|----|------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    |            | children(T)his question isracial. Godhas made us themaster organizers of the world to establish system where chaosreignsThis is the divine mission of America, and it holds for usall the profit, all the glorypossible to man."https://www.mtholyoke.edu/acad/intrel/ajb72.htm                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Record , 56thU.S. Cong.,First Sess.,pp. 704-712.                                                                   |
| 74 | January    | General (William) Shafter: "My plan," he disclosed in January1900, "would be to disarm the natives of the Philippine Islands,even if we have to kill half of them to do it."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 16:Quoted inthe BostonTranscript,January 12,1900, citedby Wolff,299. |
| 75 | June 19-21 | "(The) Republican convention renominates McKinleyThe platform states'(W)herever (U.S.) sovereign rights were                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | MILITARYSOURCE                                                                                                                    |

|    |                                                                      | extended it became the high duty of the (U.S.) Governmentto maintain its authority, to put down armed insurrection [inthe Philippines] and to confer the blessings of liberty andcivilization upon all the rescued peoples."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Delahanty,Randolph.Page 26.     |
|----|----------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
| 76 | December20                                                       | Batangas campaign: "on December 20 Bell ordered allrice and other food lying outside the camps to beconfiscated or destroyed. Wells were poisoned and allfarm animals were slaughtered."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 49 |
| 77 | December27 (yearunknown:either1899, 1900or 1901) | <ul> <li>"information about the true nature of the conduct of the war came, as usual, from the soldiers themselves. One letter, which was later republished in the New York World, gives an indication of what the Filipinos were up against. It bears reproduction in its entirety:</li> <li>'It was on the 27th of December, the anniversary of my birth, and I shall never forget the scenes I witnessed that day. As we</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 40 |
|    |                                                                      | and I shall hever lorget the scenes I witnessed that day. As weapproached the town the word passed along the line that therewould be no prisoners taken. It meant we were to shoot everyliving thing in sight-man woman or child. The first shot wasfired by the then 1st Sergeant of our company. His target was amere boy, who was coming down the mountain path into townastride of a carabao. The boy was not struck by the bullet, butthat was not the Sergeant's fault. The little Filipino boy slid fromthe back of his carabao and fled in terror up the mountain side.Half a dozen shots were fired after him.                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                         |
|    |                                                                      | The shooting now had attracted the villagers, who came out oftheir homes in alarm, wondering what it all meant. They offeredno offense, did not display a weapon, made no hostile movementwhatsoever, but they were ruthlessly shot down in cold blood,men, women and children. The poor natives huddled together orfled in terror. Many were pursued and killed on the spot. Twoold men, bearing a white flag and clasping hands like twobrothers, approached the lines. Their hair was white. They fairlytottered, they were so feeble under the weight of years. To myhorror and that of the other men in the command, the order wasgiven to fire and the two old men were shot down in their tracks.We entered the village. A man who had been on a sickbedappeared at the doorway of his home. He received a bullet in the |                                         |

|    |                                 | used in the massacre, but we were not told the name of thebullets. We didn't have to be told. We knew what they were. Inanother part of the village a mother with a babe at her breast andtwo young children at her side pleaded for mercy. She feared toleave her home which had just been fired-accidentally, I believe.She faced the flames with her children, and not a hand wasraised to save her or the little ones. They perished miserably. Itwas sure death if she left the house-it was sure death if sheremained. She feared the American soldiers, however, worsethan the devouring flames.""                                                                                              |                                                               |
|----|---------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| 78 | late 1900into early1901 | "With the majority of Filipinos still continuing to resist, the U.S. government resorted to more inhuman war tactics. Modeled after the methods used by English general, Lord Kitchener, in colonizing South Africa, (48) whole native barrios or villages were moved into "reconcentration" camps where they were forced to live. (49) This prevented the free-movement of the population, depriving the Filipino guerrillas of their support from the people who had given them food, clothing, shelter, and hiding places. These new tactics were euphemistically called 'pacification campaigns.' This method was followed by confiscating and destroying property around the area in an attempt to starve out the Filipino patriots." | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnotes 48and 49 |

| 79 | January | "Beginning January 1, 1901, as promised, Batangas wasindeed thoroughly searched and devastated, as were theneighboring provinces. Bell assembled 2,500 men in                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Francisco,Luzviminda |
|----|---------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|
|    |         | columns of 50 and the hunt for Malvar was on. Expectingto destroy everything, Bell was at least as ruthless as Smithhad been in the preceding extermination campaigns. Thedetails of the concentration camp policy were, by now,depressingly familiar. Filipinos were rounded up andherded into detention camps where overcrowded conditionsand lack of proper food and clothing resulted in thepredictable spread of infectious diseases. Malaria, beriberiand dengue fever took their toll. One correspondent | Footnote 52              |

|    |                            | described the prisoners as 'a miserable-looking lot of littlebrown rats utterly spiritless.""                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                    |  |
|----|----------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|--|
| 80 | JanuaryandFebruary | "In January and February 1901, the entire population ofMarinduque Island (pop. 51,000) was ordered into fiveconcentration camps set up by the Americans. All those who didnot comply with the order 'would be considered as acting insympathy with the insurgent forces and treated accordingly.""                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 24            |  |
| 81 | 1901 ingeneral         | "As for the Filipinos forced to live in the 'reconcentration'camps, the overcrowded conditions and lack of food andclothing resulted in the spread of infectious diseases asmalaria, beriberi and dengue fever."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnote 57 |  |
| 82 | 1901 ingeneral         | Paraphrasing from source:In Manila, Filipinos are herded into concentration camps,U.S. soldiers continue to torture Filipinos, and vultures feaston Filipino corpses.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Bradley, p.120.                                |  |
| 83 | April                      | "The American Governor of Abra Province described the'depopulation campaign' in the following terms: 'Whole villageshad been burned, storehouses and crops had been destroyed andthe entire province was as devoid of food products as was thevalley of Shenandoah after Sheridan's raid during the CivilWar.""                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 26            |  |
| 84 | Мау                        | "General Bell, who, one imagines, might be in as good aposition to judge such matters as anyone, estimated in a NewYork Times interview that over 600,000 people in Luzonalone had been killed or had died of disease as a result of thewar. The estimate, given in May 1901, means that Bell didnot include the effects of the Panay campaign, the Samarcampaign, or his own bloodthirsty Batangas campaign(where at least 100,000 died), all of which occurred after his1901 interview. Nor could it include the "post-war" period,which saw the confinement of 300,000 people in Albay,wanton slaughter in Mindanao, and astonishing death rates inBilibid Prison, to name but three instances where killingcontinued." | Francisco,Luzviminda                           |  |
| 85 | May 27                     | to rebel."""(The U.S.) Congress does not make the Filipinos (U.S.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | MILITARY                                           |  |

|    |                              | citizens."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | SOURCE                                                                |
|----|------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    |                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Delahanty,Randolph.Page 27.                                   |
| 86 | after July14             | "The observation that no records were kept of operations of thiskind later became a point of contention as news of the atrocitiesbegan to leak out. A case in point was the murder ofapproximately 1,000 Filipino prisoners of war in Sorsogon.Eyewitnesses (U.S. soldiers) testified that the prisoners wereforced to dig their own graves in groups of twenty and that eachthen received one bullet in the temple. When confronted withthis evidence the War Department dismissed it out of hand: 'Noreport has been received at the War Department in respect of orreferring to the alleged incident."" | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 28                               |
| 87 | August                       | "In August, General Smith invaded Panay Island and repeatedthe scorched-earth tactics employed in Abra 'The 18th regularsmarched from Iloilo in the south to Capiz [now Roxas] in thenorth under orders to burn every town from which they wereattacked. The result was they left a strip of land 60 miles widefrom one end of the island to the other, over which thetraditional crow could not have flown without provision.""                                                                                                                                                                                       | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 30                               |
| 88 | prior toSeptember        | Paraphrasing from source:To (U.S. Vice-President Theodore) Roosevelt, the Filipinoswere "Tagal bandits," "Malay bandits," Chinese halfbreeds"or "savages, barbarians, a wild and ignorant people, Apaches,Sioux, Chinese boxers."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Bain, p. 88.                                                          |
| 89 | Autumn                       | "In Luzon, Gen. J. Franklin Bell launches a scorched earthcampaign and forces 300,000 farmers to move to guarded'reconcentrated' encampments. U.S. soldiers burn villagesand crops. Many Filipinos are subjugated to the 'water cure,'a torture technique, to force them to surrender weapons. U.S.soldiers write home recounting orders to kill Filipinos whosurrenderCholera and starvation kill many Filipinos."                                                                                                                                                                                                    | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 28.             |
| 90 | related toAutumn1901 | "Morally buttressed with a presumed altruistic (albeitdeluded) notion of assuming the White Man'sBurdenStability operations became the pretext for how todeal with'un-Americanized' peoples(T)he Americanmilitary's involvement in the Philippines provides aninstructive example of how the U.S. military flexed itsmuscle to secure stability where the moral dimensions of its                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | MILITARYSOURCEU.S. Armyarticle,"EthicalChallenges |

|    |                              | mission held secondary consideration to the Nation'sdevelopmental economic self-interest.""(U.S. military historian Robert) Ramseyconcludes themethods (Brigadier General Franklin) Bell usedto removethe (Philippine) population from the insurgents, provide anexcellent model for future stability operations andpacification efforts."http://www.army.mil/professionalWriting/volumes/volume7/february_2009/2_09_4.html                                                                                           | in StabilityOperations,"Tracy, Sgt.Jared.                               |
|----|------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 91 | related toAutumn1901 | "General Bell said, 'This [reconcentration] had the twinvirtues of causing the people 'anxiety and apprehensions' andat the same time preventing them from aiding the guerrillas bykeeping them within a zoned area where they could be closelywatchedAll property found outside the zone after that datewould be confiscated or destroyed. Furthermore, after Jan. 1,1902, any Filipino man found outside the reconcentration areawithout a pass would be arrested and imprisoned; if heattempted to run away, he would be shot."" | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnoteunclear:possibly 55or 56 |
| 92 | related toAutumn1901 | "Although President McKinley condemns [Spain's use of]'reconcentration' [forcing civilians into deadly concentrationcamps in Cuba, starting February 1896], the U.S. Army lateradopts a similar policy in the Philippines in 1901."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 15.                           |
| 93 | related toAutumn1901 | "Ironically, these types of tactics ["re-concentration" camps]were condemned by Pres. McKinley when used in 1896 bySpanish General "Butcher" Weyler in Cuba and was one of thereasons for U.S. 'intervention' in the Spanish-American War."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | FilipinoEducationTask ForceFootnote 58:                                 |
| 94 | related toAutumn1901 | "Inside the fetid and poorly supplied camps, many uprootedcivilians died. Outside the camps, U.S. troops shot capturedfreedom fighters as common criminals because [U.S. GeneralArthur] MacArthur had stripped them of their prisoner-of-warstatus."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Bradley, p.110.                                                                 |
| 95 | September                    | "In late September, in the town of Balangiga, Samar, Americantroops had for some time been abusing the townspeople bypacking them into open wooden pens at night where they wereforced to sleep standing in the rain. Several score of guerrilla                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 32                                             |

|    | -          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                           |
|----|------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|
|    |            | Gen. Vicente Lukban's bolomen infiltrated the town and on themorning of September 28, while the Americans were eating theirbreakfast, Lukban's men suddenly fell upon them. Headsdropped into breakfast dishes. Fifty-four Americans were boloedto death, and few of the eighteen survivors escaped seriousinjury."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                           |
| 96 | September  | "Smith's orders to his men embarking upon the Samar campaigncould not have been more explicit: 'Kill and burn, kill and burn,the more you kill and the more you burn the more you pleaseme.' It was, said Smith, 'no time to take prisoners.' War was tobe waged 'in the sharpest and most decisive manner possible.'When asked to define the age limit for killing, Smith gave hisinfamous reply: 'Everything over ten.' Smith ordered Samar tobe turned into a 'howling wilderness' so that 'even the birdscould not live there.' It was boasted that, 'what fire and water[i.e., water torture] had done in Panay, water and fire woulddo in Samar.'''                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnote 33:                  |
| 97 | September  | <ul> <li>"He [General Smith] ordered that Samar be turned into a 'howling wilderness,' adding the chilling injunction:</li> <li>o 'I want no prisoners. I wish you to kill and burn: the more you kill and burn the better you will please me.' (50)</li> <li>When an officer asked for clarification of this order, Gen. Smith said the command applied to 'everyone over ten years of age.' (51). This set off an orgy of death and destruction on the island. For Smith, it was just like 'killing niggers.' (52) Smith ordered all Filipinos in the interior to move to the coast, and 'Those who were found outside would be shot and no questions asked.' Then, two days later U.S. soldiers began systematically burning every village, destroying food and hemp ready for market, killing any work animals found and sinking all native boats discovered. (53) Within six months Samar was 'quiet as a cemetery.'" (54)</li> </ul> | FilipinoEducationTask Forcefootnotes50-54 |
| 98 | October 23 | Paraphrased from source:On the island of Samar, U.S. General Jake Smith orders that allFilipino boys over the age of 10 be killed. He says, "I want noprisoners. I wish you to kill and burn, the more you kill and                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Bradley, pp. 122-123.                                     |
| I  |            | l                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                           |

|     |               | burn the better you will please me." Although official U.S.Army historians deny that these specific orders were literallyfollowed, nevertheless tens of thousands of unarmed Filipinocivilians on the island of Samar are slaughtered by the U.S.military in the Samar campaign.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                           |
|-----|---------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|
| 99  | November4 | "The U.S. Philippine Commission makes advocatingindependence an imprisonable offense."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 29. |
| 100 | December      | "In the 'zone of death' outside the camp 'dead line,' 'allrendered themselves liable,' according to Bell. <sup>53</sup> All propertywas destroyed, all houses put to the torch and the country wasmade a 'desert waste of death and desolation.' <sup>54</sup> Accordingto statistics compiled by U.S. Government officials, by thetime Bell was finished at least 100,000 people had been killedor had died in Batangas alone as a direct result of thescorched-earth policies, and the enormous dent in thepopulation of the province (which was reduced by a third) isreflected in the census figures." <sup>55</sup> | Francisco,LuzvimindaFootnotes53-55            |

| 101 | March 10 | <ul> <li>"When asked for his reaction to the courts-martial of (U.S.) Brig.Gen. Jacob H. Smith and Maj. Littleton Waller for atrocitiescommitted in the Philippines, (U.S. Gen. Frederick Funston)replied,</li> <li>'I personally strung up thirty-five Filipinos without trial, sowhat was all the fuss over Waller's "dispatching" a few"treacherous savages"? If there had been more Smiths andWallers, the war would've been over long ago. Impromptudomestic hanging might also hasten the end of the war.""</li> </ul> | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 37. |
|-----|----------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|
| 102 | April    | Moorfield Storey and Julian Codman initiate an investigationinto war crimes in the Philippines. It is titled "(U.S.) Secretary(of State Elihu) Root's Record: 'Marked Severities' inPhilippine Warfare, Report of the Philippine InvestigatingCommittee formed in April of 1902 to investigate and publicizeU.S. military atrocities in the Philippines." This investigation                                                                                                                                                                | U.S.GOV'T.SOURCE"SecretaryRoot's          |

|     |                 | documents countless harrowing eyewitness accounts from U.S.soldiers regarding atrocities they witnessed or perpetratedagainst Filipino civilians and prisoners of war from 1899 to1902.Read about these countless examples at the website below,conducting word searches for "rape," "murder," "slaughter,""bayonet," "water torture," "water cure," "reconcentration," andespecially "nigger," as well as these root words: "massacr,""tortur," and "execut":http://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Secretary Root%27s Record:%22Marked Severities%22 in Philippine Warfare | Record:MarkedSeverities inPhilippineWarfare,"August 29,1902                                                                                                                                |
|-----|-----------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 103 | June 17         | "The people of the United States want us to kill all the men, fuckall the women, and raise up a new race in these islands." RobertAustill, soldier in the Philippines, 1902                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Bradley, p.97Footnote:Robert E.Austill toHerbertWelsh, June17, 1902,HerbertWelshCollection,Correspondence, Box A,HistoricalSociety ofPennsylvania. |
| 104 | by late1902 | Paraphrased from source:In 1902, 44 U.S. officers and soldiers are indicted for war crimes.39 are initially convicted, but eventually all of them walk.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Bradley, p.126.                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| calling it a 'direct violation of the law.'" | Delahanty,Randolph.Page 30. |
|----------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
|----------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|

| 106 | March 2                | "President Roosevelt abrogates the Bates Treaty [anofficial 1899 pledge between the U.S. Government and theMuslim Filipinos of the Sulu Archipelago to respect theirsovereignty] and (he) claims sovereignty over the IslamicSulu Archipelago."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 31  |
|-----|------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|
| 107 | April 30               | "1,200 tribal Filipinos are put on display at the LouisianaPurchase Exposition, a world's fair held in St. Louis."                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 31. |
| 108 | related toApril 30 | Paraphrased from source:Filipinos are displayed to the U.S. public like zoo animalsat the "Philippine Reservation" of the World's Fair in St.Louis, 1904. The purpose is two-fold: to justify a viciouswar that in the long term is supposedly a "favor" to theFilipino people in terms of bringing "civilization" to them;and to present living trophies that demonstrate America'snew role on the international stage as the latest newimperial power.                     | Bradley, pp. 129-136.                                     |
| 109 | September5         | <ul> <li>"(U.S. President Roosevelt's) views on imperialism andAmerica's role in the world were linked to his belief in thesuperiority of the white 'race' over non-white peoples. 'Themost ultimately righteous of all wars,' he wrote, 'is a warwith savages.'"</li> <li>[His quote of Roosevelt is from Roosevelt's book, TheWinning of the West, in which Roosevelt admits it was indeedU.S. policy to exterminate Indians and take their lands.]</li> </ul> | MILITARYSOURCEDelahanty,Randolph.Page 35. |

| 110 | March 5 | U.S. Gen. Leonard Wood leads a massacre of 900 [firstreported as only 600] Filipino civilians (including womenand children) hiding in the crater of Bud Dajo, Jolo island.President Roosevelt sends Wood a telegram on March 10,saying, "I congratulate you and the officers and men of yourcommand upon the brilliant feat of arms wherein you andthey so well upheld the honor of the American flag." | Clemens,Samuel (MarkTwain)."Comments onthe MoroMassacre."March 12, 1906. |
|-----|---------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|     |         | http://www.historyisaweapon.com/defcon1/clemensmoromassacre.html                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                  |

| 111 | June 11-15 | "Several hundred 'Moros' and 14 U.S. soldiers are killedin the Battle of Bud Bagsak in Jolo, the last major battleof the Philippine War." | MILITARYSOURCE                  |
|-----|----------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
|     |                |                                                                                                                                                   | Delahanty,Randolph. Page32. |